Produced as events require

August 22 2011

The Hamz regime in Gaza, with Egyptian prompting, has ending its rocket shooting into Israel and is seeking to enforce a de facto truce. Local factions continue to fire into Israel, but Israel has declined to respond. It repeatedly warned that its attacks will end as soon as attacks from the Gaza Strip cease. Israel has also warned that continued firing will result in a vigorous response. Hamas is now seeking to impose its authority on the various splinter factions still firing salvos into Israel.

The present round of fighting began following a series of attacks from Gaza led to the death of 8 Israelis and the wounding of over thirty. Israel responded by killing the leaders of the faction which organized the attack.
